Urgent for ROMAC

I guess the accommodation doesn't need to be in the home of a Rotarian, so If anyone knows someone who knows someone.... The new year has started with a busy time for ROMAC and it is seeking your help for a 16 year old girl arriving on 19 January for surgery on 23 January at The Children's Hospital, Westmead.

This girl came to Sydney four years ago when she was 12 years of age, suffering with multiple burns to her upper body and head. This time she is coming in for skin grafts, to ease the tightness of the skin.

JennyTan is from Guxin Village, Guizhou Province (see map and image attached).

What we are URGENTLY seeking is:

1. accommodation for Jenny and her Mother, for the first say four (4) nights, and
2. interpreters who speak her language mandarin, ie her dialect of Mandarin.

If you know of anyone who might be able to help, please let me know.

Bush Poetry John Barclay

John became interested in poetry 15 years ago through a friend who knew he had written a book in the 1970's

He was advised to write poetry about "stuff" he knows.

John and his wife have been making ginger beer every week for the past 40 years. Bottling is an issue when it ferments, and the bottles can explode.

John also wrote a book A waltz between Wars

GINGER BEER

Obtain a Ginger Beer "Plant" from a friend. If you cannot find one of these, we found this in a magazine. We have not used it so cannot vouch for it:

To make the Plant: Place 8 sultanas in a container Add the juice of 2 lemons

Add 4 teaspoons of white sugar

Add 1 teaspoon of grated lemon rind Add 2 teaspoons of ground ginger Add 2 cups of cold tap water

Cover with a piece of muslin cloth

After 2-3 days it should start to ferment

Each day now add 2 small teaspoons of ground ginger Also each day now add 4 teaspoons of white sugar The plant will be ready after 7 days

MRS BARCLAY'S OLDE STYILE HOME BREW GIN6ER BEER

- 1 Boil 2 pints (1.25 litres) of water in a large saucepan
 - 2 Dissolve 1 lb (.45kg) white sugar in water by stirring
 - 3 Add 6 pints (3.75 litres) of cold water
 - 4- Add thee juice of 2 medium lemons
 - 5 Gently add the liquid from the plant (with no sediment)
 - 6 Bottle your brew (clean plastic soft-drink screw-cap bottles)
 - 7 Halve the sediment (discard half or give it to a friend)
 - 8 Add cold tap water to the plant sediment - discard sultanas
 - 9 Cover and feed plant daily with 1 teaspoon ground ginger and 1 teaspoon white sugar (it will be ready again in about 1 week)
 - 10 When plastic bottles with the brew become tight to touch they are ready for refrigeration. If not refrigerated, release the pressure (by unscrewing & re-tightening) every 2-3 days. It will soon tighten again by fermentation
 - 11 The cheapest way to buy ground ginger is in bulk from health food shops
 - 12 Good luck, and enjoy your drink.

Even this grinch can do good

HECKLER (SMH Thursday 22 Dec 2011)

YES, I'm more than a little overweight. Yes, my head is bald (if you don't count my nose and ears), and yes, I'm closer to my centenary than my birthday.

I'm white, can't dance to save myself, I'm mortgaged to the hilt, and I'm more inclined to express crass opinions than share the love with positive reinforcement, particularly after my evening's second chateau cardboard.

Dammit, I've worked hard for those opinions. They are the fruit of scars borne from an age when shoddy work was simply thrown back in your face. Hey, a science teacher – who was a priest at the time – once marked an essay with nothing more than the words "Bullshit! Bullshit! Bullshit! Bullshit! Bullshit!" scrawled from the top of the page to the bottom. It is of no consolation that he eventually relinquished his dog collar. He went on to find a wife, have enough kids to fill a Tarago, put them through private schools, and make a stock market fortune, using his geological "inside" knowledge.

Meanwhile, here I am heckling 450 words to justify my existence in a world where the kids don't understand me, my ex-wife has shaved her head and donned the saffron robes of a Buddhist monastery, my old schoolmates are popping off the twig and, as it is Christmas, I'm supposed to feel good about everything.

So I'm casting around looking at my life, searching for something – anything – to hang a hope upon.

And there it is, staring me in the face. For the past 15 years, I've been creating history. I've been educating the poor, feeding the hungry, curing cataract blindness, battling malaria, educating conflict resolvers, and doing all this by the simple act of cooking the odd sausage.

I joined a Rotary club in 1997.

I was still in my 30s, and I swear I was so embarrassed about joining what I had always thought was an organisation for old fat men in suits that for the first 10 years I didn't tell a soul.

And in all that time, as the Rotary International roll call continued to diminish, we were urged to improve our PR. We all thought that meant getting stories about our fund-raisers in local newspapers. Of course, it's much more than that.

So I began telling friends how Rotary is helping to cure polio – only the second time in history a disease has been eradicated.

How our weekend community barbecues raise enough money to make the world a better place.

We have plenty of women in Rotary these days, and still too many old, fat men in suits. But surely Christmas is the time for old, fat men in (red) suits.
