Conversations are continuing.

ICELAND

Michael showed a dramatic film ...over >

Iceland (continued)

Michael showed a dramatic film of the Volcano eruption in 2009. It was described as an 'ash eruption' and some 500 tons of ash PER SECOND covered farms, fields and houses.

Streams turned into mud flows. Rivers rose several meters.

Tourists took bags of dust away as souvenirs.

A benefit was that no fertilizer was needed on crops the following season.

Glacia ice floats down to the river out to sea, visible beyond this bridge.

Traditional building style - earth roof for insulation.

In all, a most interesting presentation by Michael.
