Bulletin of the Rotary Club Of Ku-ring-gai Inc - Chartered 6th February 1959

Volume 57 No. 39 11 May 2015

Rotary monthly theme: youth services

This week: Robert Mulas: The parent café - creating community amid diversity

When he was the Principal of Fairfield High School, Robert Mulas started a project allowing new migrant parents to get together over a cup of tea to learn about their community and to encourage their involvement in their children's schooling.

In just a few years this has turned into a cooperative catering enterprise specialising in a diverse range of foods from the participants' countries of origin. The café now has its own building in the grounds of the school, which is used by the parents group for a variety of purposes, including provision of educational courses and information needed by migrants.

Robert, who continues his involvement as Public Officer of Parents Café Fairfield Inc, will tell us about this wonderful community building initiative that has assisted the integration of many newcomers to Sydney.

Last week's guests & announcements

President Tony:

- Welcomed Gary Keating; and
- Caused much amusement by promoting a well-known retailer's sale.

Caroline Jones:

- Urged members to invite their neighbours and friends to 'Black Coffee' on Thursday, 14 May, to raise funds for disaster relief in Vanuatu and Nepal and enticed them with wine and sandwiches from 7.15 pm; and
- Thanked Georgina Manning for organising a fund-raising raffle.

Michael Midlam sought volunteers to distribute BowelCare kits to pharmacies, saying that:

- If bowel cancer is detected early, it can be treated successfully;

- Everyone over 50 should take the test;
- BowelCare (formerly 'Bowelscan') is not a fundraising project, but last year 487 possible cancer cases were identified through it;
- Users now mail their tests, so there's no need for collection of used kits.

Michael Tyler:

- Reiterated his request for a volunteer to produce Koongga for 4 weeks in July and August (and thanked President Tony for volunteering); and
- Reminded members that a new editor for Koongga would be needed after June 2016 and invited interested members to become involved soon in order to learn the process of preparing and publishing the bulletin.

Greg Newling explained Paul Harris Fellow ('PHF') recognition. He said that it is recognition of a donation of $US1,000 to the Rotary Foundation. (The sum has not changed since the inception of PHF recognition, when $US1,000 was worth much more than today.) By making such donations, Rotary clubs gain credits which they can use to confer PHF recognition on people, whether or not Rotarians, who have shown outstanding commitment to the club or the community.

have a few speakers who will require travel expenses in future. The facilitation team have spent numerous hours at planning weekends, debrief meetings and, as the feedback from our RYLarians every year states, we cannot do without the speakers or the elements that hold a fee. Money raised during the evening from raffles and auctions will all go back into the RYLA program for the coming years. We value the funding that Rotary provides and with the additional funds we hope to ease the pressure on the Rotary accounts.”

Days for Girls, Gingoog City, Philippines

For years Gingoog City in the Philippines has been a beneficiary of the Rotary Club of Burwood through the Donations In Kind program that sent aid such as medical equipment for public hospitals and barangay health centres; computers, books and other educational materials delivered to schools; and clothing provided to the community especially to those who were affected by calamities that hit the country.

Now the city has been helped by the Days for Girls International Project that helps not only girls and women, but the community as a whole. Apart from the primary aim of the Days for Girls project to help girls and women gain access to quality sustainable feminine hygiene and awareness, it will also address number of significant issues in the locality, such as an increasing rate of teenage and unplanned pregnancies, improper disposal of waste produced from disposable sanitary pads and solving the unemployment issue especially for women.

Project components are:

- Awareness: Currently the percentage of teenage pregnancy is 56% and 72% were unplanned pregnancies. All these happened because they are not aware or they lacked the knowledge that every girl and woman should have. The project will integrate lectures on reproductive health, natural family planning & birth control and advocacy on issues like pornography, teenage pregnancy, sexually transmitted diseases and sexual abuse.
- DfG kit distribution to girls and women, with instruction on the proper use and keeping of the kits. With reusable pads, there will be no wastage for three years.
- Local production of DfG kits: Local seamstresses will be employed to produce the DfG kits.

The DfGI Gingoog Team is composed of local young people who were trained to be women's health ambassadors, tasked with reaching local girls and women and raising awareness and distributing DfG kits.

Behind the anti-vaccination movement

Minda Dentler is the first woman handcyclist to complete the Kona Ironman. She is a polio survivor and recently made her views on vaccination clear in an article in the May 2015 edition of the EndPolioNow newsletter.

She says "If not for the anti-vaccination movement, preventable diseases wouldn't be a risk to children in developed countries". She also makes the excellent point that these 'anti-vaxxers' send exactly the wrong message to parents in other countries that are trying to overcome the scourge of these diseases. So the question is: where did this 'anti-vaccination movement' come from?

The debate about the risks associated with vaccines really took off in February 1998 when British doctor, Andrew Wakefield, published a study in The Lancet. In a paper authored by Wakefield and twelve others, it was claimed that their research had proved that the measles, mumps, rubella (MMR) vaccine was a direct cause of autism. This sensational claim received huge public attention. Subsequently:

- All of the paper's researchers (except Wakefield and one other) have repudiated the study;
- The study's lack of rigour and data tampering were exposed (one example: a vaccination date was reportedly altered from after onset of autism to just before);
- It was reported that Wakefield applied for a grant on the basis of the study findings before the study took place;
- It was reported that GBP435,643 was paid to Wakefield for evidence in a class action;
- The Lancet retracted the article;
- Wakefield's licence to practice medicine was withdrawn by the UK's General Medical Council; and
- Hundreds of scientific studies have since been carried out on the subject, none of which replicated its findings.

The problem is that, despite the overwhelming scientific evidence, many parents believe that there is a link between vaccines (all vaccines!) and autism — indeed it would seem that Wakefield continues to make a good living in the US peddling his theories.

This parental refusal of vaccines is the issue that Minda Dentler was describing. Vaccination rates are lower than they should be because parents:

- Do 'research' online and become scared by the scientific-sounding claims of Wakefield and his adherents; and
- Place greater credence in these anti-vaxxers than they do on the advice of their own medical practitioners.

Any decline in vaccination rates could prove devastating. That's because if vaccination rates fall below a certain point — known as the 'herd immunity' level — it is not only possible for unvaccinated children to be afflicted by the disease, it's also possible for an outbreak to occur. Those of us who saw the outbreaks of the 20th century know what that means.

Those who didn't see those outbreaks need some information. A very quick summary of the impacts of some of the vaccine-preventable diseases is available at: <http://rotarydistrict9685.org.au/page/behind-the-anti-vaccination-movement/#sthash.gSzq8onL.dpuf>. Please share!

Club business meeting

Bobbin Head Cycle Classic

President Tony:

- Thanked Michael Midlam for volunteering to liaise with Terrey Hills residents concerning their complaints about the Bobbin Head Cycle Classic ('BHCC').
- Announced the change of date and venue for the BHCC presentation to charities: Tuesday, 19 May at Pymble Golf Club, St Ives. (There will be no meeting of the club at Killara Golf Club on Monday, 18 May.)
- Called for volunteers for:
 - Fundraising for the BHCC; and
 - Prizes manager for the BHCC.
- Thanked Jack McCartney, who was responsible for raising $60,000 from sponsors - about 25% of the total raised by the BHCC.
- Requested members to provide Jack McCartney with the names and contact details of acquaintances in business organisations which might be willing to sponsor the next BHCC.
- Said that Peter Kipps and others are investigating a new system for management of BHCC volunteers and a new fundraising system.
- Reported a proposal put forward at a BHCC committee meeting to distribute the proceeds of the next BHCC 50% to Lifeline, 15% to Ku-ring-gai Youth Development Service and 35% between the 4 organising clubs, for allocation to their respective chosen charities.

There was some discussion of the proposal, including these points:

- John Aitken was not keen on the proposed reduction of the percentage available for allocation to our club's chosen charities.
- No decision on the proposal would be made until after President-Elect Graham returns from overseas.
- Jack McCartney having too many charities as beneficiaries reduces potential donors' interest.
- Bob Elsworth said promoting donations "to Lifeline and other Rotary charities" won't work with sponsors.
- David Forsythe recommended establishment of a Rotary 'deductible gift recipient fund'; said that the BHCC committee should now be planning for 2017; and suggested that all 4 organising clubs should donate equally to the selected charities, rather than separately to their respective chosen charities.
- Bob Elsworth suggested adding $10 to the BHCC entry fee, to be donated to organisations that are not deductible gift recipients.

Further discussion was deferred to a meeting to be convened for the purpose at another time.

Koongga

Michael Tyler put forward for discussion the ideas of:

- Dispensing with the 'members only' page of birthdays, rosters, etc from Koongga, relying instead on members visiting the club's website for that information; and
- Dispensing with Koongga and replacing it with:
- Information published on the club's website; and
- Facebook posts directing people to that information.

There was a mixed reaction from the meeting and the conclusion appeared to be that, for convenience, Koongga should continue in its present form.

Lifeline

Central Coast NSW

Lifeline was founded by the Reverend Alan Walker at Methodist Central Mission in Sydney in 1963.

Lifeline Central Coast, began in Gosford in March 1981. In 1986 Lifeline Central Coast moved to the current offices in Cary Street.

Over the years, Lifeline Central Coast has expanded its operations from the traditional telephone crisis support service to include a range of services to relieve the stress and pain of the people of the Central Coast.

Lifeline's focus is 'Saving Lives'. Every day in Australia, more than seven people die by suicide and a further 160 per day are admitted to hospital. Most suicide and self-harming behaviour can be prevented.

We rely heavily on the support of the people of the Central Coast; 85% of our funds are derived from our shops, events, donations and fund raising with 15% of funds from Local Health Service and NSW Health grants. Our volunteers are fundamental to our ongoing service.
